

Prinsesse fik blomster af lille Signe

Prinsesse Marie åbnede skole- og klimakonference i Sønderborg på en råkold oktoberdag. 27. oktober 2009 14:44

Traditionen tro vankede der royale blomster, da prinsesse Marie i dag gæstede Sønderborg . Det var Signe Brodersen fra 5. b på Hørup centralskole, der fik lov til at komme helt tæt på prinsessen.

Marie er vant til al slags vejrlig, ikke mindst en ruskende blæst, fra hverdagen på Schackenborg i Møgeltønder i den flade, forblæste del af det sydvestlige Sønderjylland.

Og med sin påklædning viste hun da også, at hun var forberedt på det råkold oktobervejr. Marie havde iført sig en dejlig varm, grå ulden jakke, der sad rigtig godt tæt om prinsessens hals.

Marie havde taget turen tværs over Sønderjylland fra Møgeltønder i vest til Sønderborg i øst for at åbne en konference. Konferencen var den ottende i rækken, hvor skolelærere og -elever i fra Asien og Europa netværker på tværs af landegrænser.

Men det var prinsessen, der vakte mest interesse, da hun indtog talerstolen.

- Det er et stort privilegium for mig, at få lov til at deltage i åbningen af denne konference. Det gennemgående tema for dette års konference er klima og bæredygtighed, indledte prinsessen og fortsatte.

- Et meget relevant tema på grund af klimatopmødet i København til december. Målet i de kommende dage er, at I skal inspirere hinanden i diskussionen om klima og bæredygtighed, sagde Prinsesse Marie.

Konferencen har 100 deltagere og går under navnet Asian-Europa Classroom Network Conference. Den varer ugen ud.

Princess was handed flowers by little Signe

Princess Marie opened a school and climate conference in Sønderborg on a raw October day.

In keeping with tradition, royal flowers were presented to Princess Marie when she visited Sønderborg today. It was Signe Brodersen from grade 5. b at Hørup Centralskole, who presented the blooms to the Princess.

Marie is used to all kind of weather, including squally wind from her every day life at Schackenborg in Møgeltønder, in the flat wind-swept part of the southwestern Sønderjylland.

With her attire she showed she was prepared for the raw October weather. Marie was clad in a nice warm grey woolen jacket which was tight wrapped around her neck.

Marie made the trip across Sønderjylland from Møgeltønder in the west to Sønderborg in the east to open the conference. This is the eighth conference where school teachers and students from all over Asia and Europe network across borders.

But it was the princess who caused a stir when she occupied the rostrum.

She opened her speech by saying, “It is a great privilege for me to be allowed to take part in opening this conference. The general topic for the conference this year is climate and sustainability, a very relevant topic because of the climate summit meeting in Copenhagen in December. The objective for the coming days is for you to inspire each other in discussions on the climate and sustainability”.

This was the Asia-Europe Classroom Network Conference, where 100 participants networked for a whole week.
